Good afternoon Mr. Stevenson,

I am responding to your request for access to the NFLIS Interactive Data Site. Here is the URL to the NFLIS web site and your username.

URL: <https://www.nflis.deadiversion.usdoj.gov>

Username: lab418_0

For security purposes, I will send you the associated password in a separate message.

Please note that we are currently working on some technical issues that have occurred on the NFLIS website. As a result of these issues, we have temporarily moved the website to a new web server. Unfortunately, not all of the sites normal functionality is available. This directly affects the NFLIS queries. At this point, the query executes properly but the report does will not display in the browser.

If there are some queries that you would like for me to run for you, then please let me know and I would be happy to help.

Hi Jeff:

Please send the username and password. Also, please offer to run any data for him until the server issue is resolved.
Val.

The Massachusetts Department of Public Health Laboratories in Boston and Amherst are participating laboratories in the NFLIS. We have lost or forgotten our username and password for access to the data on your website. Could you supply me with that information?

Thank you,
Allan Stevenson
